Tyjuan Walker was featured in a segment of News on 6 for Manufacturing Day. He was one of several Advantage team members who volunteered to teach 9th graders at local schools about manufacturing jobs. Some of the schools involved included Checotah, Fort Gibson, Creek, Muskogee AR, Oklahoma School for the Blind, Hilldale, and Oktaha schools. Students did building challenge activities using candy and toothpicks, using manufacturing as a way to solve a challenge.

“We need these youth to be able to bring innovative, creative ideas that can inspire and change the way we do manufacturing,” said Tyjuan in his interview. “So today we’re here just discussing manufacturing with them, introducing manufacturing to them, and just showing them how important it is. It’s important to get students thinking about jobs while they’re still in school.”

Organizers say there are 5,000-7,000 manufacturing jobs in Muskogee alone. They hope students walk away from these activities knowing a little more about all that’s offered in the field.

Dason Morgan, Jeremy Garrett, and Jon Shaw volunteer in a 9th grade classroom to teach about careers in manufacturing.
